Is that where a city is born?

On the platform
pairs of alien eyes collide.

In the tunnels
an ancient midwife eyes
the steel tracks
where a birth bed glides.

Inside railcars
her unborn nation rides.

Is that where a city is born?

In lofty art
above the heated brakes
historic scenes
of shoulders disembark
to a future
claimed in an angry march.

History hides
inside the architect's arch.

Bar Clacson is now serving fresh cocktails and bar bites.

// 351 S Broadway

Fabrique is now brewing signature coffee drinks like the supremely fragrant and flavorful latte macchiato
lavender.

On the 9th anniversary of Councilmember Jose Huizar's Bringing Back Broadway initiative, Night on Broadway was yet again a magnificent production, activating all of Broadway and celebrating the past, present and future of the beloved historic corridor.

The event took place on Saturday January 28th and drew an even larger crowd than last year, with a preliminary count reporting over 70,000 attendees by 8pm.

The night was filled with free performances like the Oingo Boingo Dance Party, where the band performed some of their biggest hits on the Olympic stage and the KCRW's Silent Disco Party on 9th and Broadway. Meanwhile, Cage Dodgeball brought out the competition on 8th and Broadway, and DTLA Proud created their very own block party on 4th St within the already bustling festival.

The Historic Core BID would like to thank our residents, property owners and especially our Security Team for ensuring this night was not only a success but most importantly an enjoyable and safe evening!

Since 1985, the famous Anthony Quinn has towered over Broadway, arms spread wide in a welcoming embrace. The "Pope of Broadway" 70-foot-tall mural, painted by Eloy Torrez, depicts the Mexican-born actor dancing in a manner reminiscent of his role as Zorba the Greek. Behind him is the Bradbury Building, an architectural landmark that is directly across the street. A view of this mural from the lobby of the Bradbury Building, will reveal itself as a continuation of the floor patter of the historic building.

In advance of the Night on Broadway celebrations, the mural was restored. Los Angeles City Councilmember José Huizar joined Torrez, actor Edward James Olmos and community members to celebrate a $150,000 overhaul of the work in the parking lot behind the Victor Clothing Company building at 242 S. Broadway. The restoration brought back to life the vibrant colors and intricate details of the acclaimed mural and was vital for the legacy of the Bringing Back Broadway initiative.

Library of Black Lies, shown for the first time on the West Coast at Beta Main, showcases Edgar Arceneaux challenging the narrative of American progress, and in particular, African American progress through the selection, placement, and modification of books in a library of his own invention. Through this ever so relevant installation made last year, the artist calls for a deliberate attempt to discern what is innately true or false, particularly in the realm of media and how it shapes our past, present and future.

The exhibition is free of cost and will run from February 4th 2017 to March 26th 2017, on view Wednesday through Sunday from 11am to 7pm.
